1 Description

This advanced seminar in philosophy of mind will center on two topics: mental content and human nature. We will begin by asking whether content depends on facts wholly internal to the minds of persons or whether content depends on external facts too. After spring break, we will ask what we are. Are we souls, constituted persons, animals, brains, or nothing at all? The reason these two topics are paired is that both have far-reaching consequences for other corners of philosophy. In particular, the divide between externalists and internalists over mental content is important to epistemology and philosophy of language. Similarly, questions about human nature bears on ethics, philosophy of religion, and more.

2 Textbook

There is no required textbook. All readings will be posted on Sakai. But Ruth Millikan’s Language, Thought, and Other Biological Categories (ISBN# 9780262631150) and Eric Olson’s What Are We? (ISBN# 0195176421) are worth owning because we will be reading large selections from them.
3 Evaluation

There are a total of 2000 points that can be earned in this course. These points can be earned through participation (200 pts), preciś assignments (400 pts), a group presentation (400 pts), and a final paper (1,000 pts). The final grade will be calculated from your total points.

\begin{align*}
A &= 1800–2000 \text{ pts (90–100\%)} \\
B+ &= 1700–1799 \text{ pts (85–89\%)} \\
B &= 1600–1699 \text{ pts (80–84\%)} \\
C+ &= 1500–1599 \text{ pts (75–79\%)} \\
C &= 1400–1499 \text{ pts (70–74\%)} \\
D &= 1200–1399 \text{ pts (60–69\%)} \\
F &= 0–1199 \text{ pts (50–59\%)}
\end{align*}

Participation (10%). You are expected to participate in two ways. First, you are required to post a question on Sakai about the reading on the day before class. These questions will often jumpstart our in-class discussion. Though it is not required, you are encouraged to engage with each others questions online too. Second, you are required to participate in each 3-hour class. Not counting the first day, class meets 13 times.

Preciś assignments (20%). You will write a preciś of two papers in the first half of the semester on mental content. They are due on 2/16 and 3/9. Each will be exactly 700 words. No more, no less. If this interests you, the second preciś can optionally be replaced with an oral exam to be completed with me the week before spring break.

Group presentation (20%). Starting 3/30, you will break into five groups to give joint presentations on theories of personal ontology. Your group’s task is to defend the assigned view of what we are to the best of your abilities. Students will be graded on their individual contributions to the presentations. Each group will prepare by reading a number of related articles and must meet with me the week prior to their presentation.

Final paper (50%). There will be a final paper worth 1,000 pts that is due during exam week. It must be on personal ontology. Given the work you will be investing for the group presentation, it is wise to have your paper be related to material covered in the presentation.
4 Policies

4.1 Attendance policy

Attention is mandatory. After two absences, your final grade drops a letter. After that, your final grade will continue to drop for every absence. If you cannot attend a class session, report your absence at https://sims.rutgers.edu/ssra/. Absences for medical reasons require a doctor’s note and are adjudicated on a discretionary basis.

4.2 Late policy

I will not accept late work.

4.3 Academic integrity

I expect students to follow the academic integrity policy for all of the required work. If you are confused about what counts as plagiarism or cheating, consult the policy at http://academicintegrity.rutgers.edu/academic-integrity-at-rutgers.
4.4 Laptop policy

Laptop use is not permitted in class. This might seem harsh, but the reason is simple. Studies show that students perform better if they are unplugged. And I want you to succeed in this class. For more on the basis of this class policy, consult the following articles:

At the beginning of each class, I will provide a handout. I recommend taking notes on these handouts and then keeping a folder of the all the handouts passed out during the semester.

5 Sakai

I will be making frequent use of Sakai. You can access the portal for Sakai at https://sakai.rutgers.edu/portal. In addition to being the place where I post readings, handouts from class, and course announcements, you will frequently posting there.

6 Disability

If you are differently abled, you are encouraged to work with a Coordinator from the Office of Disability Services. They will provide you with an official notice for you to give me, which will detail what we can do to help you succeed in this philosophy class.

8  Readings

8.1  Weekly readings

The readings for the course are listed below in the order they appear on the schedule. All of the readings will be available on Sakai. For many of the readings, the copy available on Sakai will be shorter than the version listed. That is because some of the readings are drawn from books, dissertations, or articles that are notoriously long.

8.2 Presentation readings

Each group must read the papers listed below for their assigned view of personal ontology. It is supererogatory to read the papers for the other groups. It is also strongly suggested that students seek out additional sources on PhilPapers to help present and defend their view. Do not hesitate to contact me if you want reading recommendations.

8.2.1 Dualism

8.2.2 Constitution

8.2.3 Animalism

8.2.4 Brains

8.2.5 Nihilism
